

What to do if you see a Sexist Bedsheet Sign

@socialissuescommission @queens_ams

Misogynistic Homecoming and St.Patricks day signs have too long of a history at Queen's University.

- They perpetuate a culture of sexual harassment and violence.
- They sexualize female students and normalize sexually explicit and innapropriate behaviour.

IF YOU SEE A SEXIST BEDSHEET SIGN, TAKE ACTION!

Call Campus Security

Avoid calling the Police and creating a potentially dangerous situation. You can call campus security at 613-533-6733 to ask them to remove the sign.

File a Harassment and Discrimination complaint or Student Code of Conduct complaint

This is a violation of the Queen's Student Code of Conduct and students have been held accountable for making misogynistic sheet signs. You can file a complaint by going online to the University Secretariat and Legal Council, then going to the Harassment and Discrimination page and clicking "Making a Complaint".
